Favourites of Stage and Screen - Normansfield Theatre

Reviewer & Rating	Review
Susan Cummins (5/5)	An absolutely fantastic evening and the venue was very special. Cannot wait for the opportunity to go back
Jo Mead (5/5)	Lovely venue. Great concert delightful evening
Morene Metzner (5/5)	Whilst most people were watching The Last Night of the Proms we were entertained by the Richmond Symphonic Concert Band.No flag waving or Rule Britannia but just as enjoyable. The arrangements brought back memories of some of the great shows and films we had seen and enjoyed.Tom Hughes,the conductor,introduced each piece which made it more interesting. The concert was in aid of the Down's Syndrome Association at Normansfield Theatre where previously there was a hospital on this site founded by Dr. Downs
Jennifer Minerve (5/5)	i simply loved the band , every single thing they played , i had a great time at normansfield theatre , and it was my pleasure to put a few pounds into the bucket , for such a very good cause . a very beautiful building , and the staff very helpful indeed !
Bianka Fawzy (5/5)	A wonderful evening with beautiful music and a very entertaining and knowledgeable conductor. Loved the stunning venue - what a treasure in the outskirts of London.
Sidney Cannon (4/5)	My first visit to the Normansfield Theatre, remember playing football some 40 years ago at Normansfield when it was a hospital now residential but nice to see they have kept some of the old buildings including the theatre, also nice to have another local venue to go to. Met up with a few friends and had a good evening of entertainment listening to the Richmond Symphonic Orchestral Band playing some great tracks from films. Also learnt that John Langdon Down did a lot of research as a physician whilst in Teddington and Down Syndrome bears his name, his great work is shown on the walls of this lovely architectural building..

To RSCB members from Tom: These wonderful reviews of 9 September have been sent onto us by Normansfield Theatre. Best wishes Tom
